(ANSA) - ROME, JUN 9 - The recent trend which has seen the number of new COVID-19 cases in Italy fall has slowed, the GIMBE independent medical foundation said in its weekly coronavirus monitoring report on Thursday.

It said the number of new cases fell by 7.8% in the June 1-7 period with respect to the previous week.

That compares to a drop of over 23% in last week's report.

GIMBE added that the number of new cases actually rose in 22 of Italy's provinces in the June 1-7 period.

The report said the number of people in intensive care with COVID fell by 11.7% and coronavirus-linked deaths fell by 28.3%.
